EDITOR, Disney News
1313 Harbor Blvd., Anaheim, Calif. 92803

Sirs:

We have been going to Disney World and staying at the Polynesian Resort for six years now. This is a favorite place—one that will be a family tradition every summer for the Robertsons.

Sincerely,
Larry, Jay, Scott Robertson
Germantown, Tennessee

Sirs:

The children in my fifth grade enjoyed the "How to Draw Goofy" article so much. Is it possible to get past articles?

Sincerely,
Harold S. Crowley Jr.
Wollaston, Mass.

Similar articles on Mickey and Thumper were published in our Spring and Summer 1977 issues. It seems there was a book on this subject which was discontinued several years ago. You might peruse your favorite bookstores for a past copy.—ED.

Sirs:

Loved the "Harness" article and the "How to Draw" series.

Sincerely,
Stacie Short
Sonoma, California

Sirs:

Do you know of any other magazine published by an amusement park? Also, why doesn't Tinkerbell fly off the Matterhorn any more?

Sincerely,
John Nava
San Jose, California 95119

We know of no subscription magazine put out by any other amusement park. Tinkerbell's "landing field" was removed due to construction of Big Thunder Mountain Railroad. She may fly again this summer, however.—ED.

Sirs:

I love Winnie the Pooh and was wondering when you'll have an article on how to draw Winnie.

Sincerely,
David Wasick
Delafield, Wisconsin

We have concluded our "How to Draw" series for the time being, but will consider your suggestion when we plan future articles.—ED.

PORTS-O-CALL

The World's Fifth Largest Navy

With more than 400 ships and boats carrying ten million guests annually, the Walt Disney World navy ranks as the fifth largest fleet on the Seven Seas. If a vacation complex seems a strange owner for a navy of this size, the variety of vessels that makes up the armada is even stranger. Certainly no other navy registers side-wheel steamboats, people-powered pedal boats, and turn-of-the-century launches. And the fleet is growing all the time.

The biggest ships of the flotilla are three 600-passenger ferryboats which carry guests to and from the Magic Kingdom. Next in line come a pair of stern-wheel steamboats, the Admiral Joe Fowler and the Richard F. Irvine. Replicas of Mississippi River craft, both were named after key builders and designers in the Disney organization.

In the Magic Kingdom, adventure-seeking guests can travel aboard skillfully guided jungle launches or mysterious looking submarines patterned after Capt. Nemo's sub from "20,000 Leagues Under the Sea." Another incomparable armada snakes its way through the canals of a Caribbean port city being pillaged by pirates.

In Fantasyland, a fleet of 30 boats carries happy passengers through six show areas in "It's A Small World"; and in Liberty Square and Frontierland, the Rivers of America are literally alive with Mike Fink Keelboats, Tom Sawyer's Log rafts, and explorer canoes.

Even on the two Walt Disney World lakes, Bay Lake and the Seven Seas Lagoon, unconventional launches like those used to carry British seaman into the rivers of China along with more conventional sailboats, mini-speedboats, water ski boats and Flote Botes dot the 650 acres of water.

Altogether, there are some two dozen different types of boats in the Walt Disney World navy, many of them one-of-a-kind. And, each craft in the navy plays an important part in the total vacation experience of the Vacation Kingdom of the world.

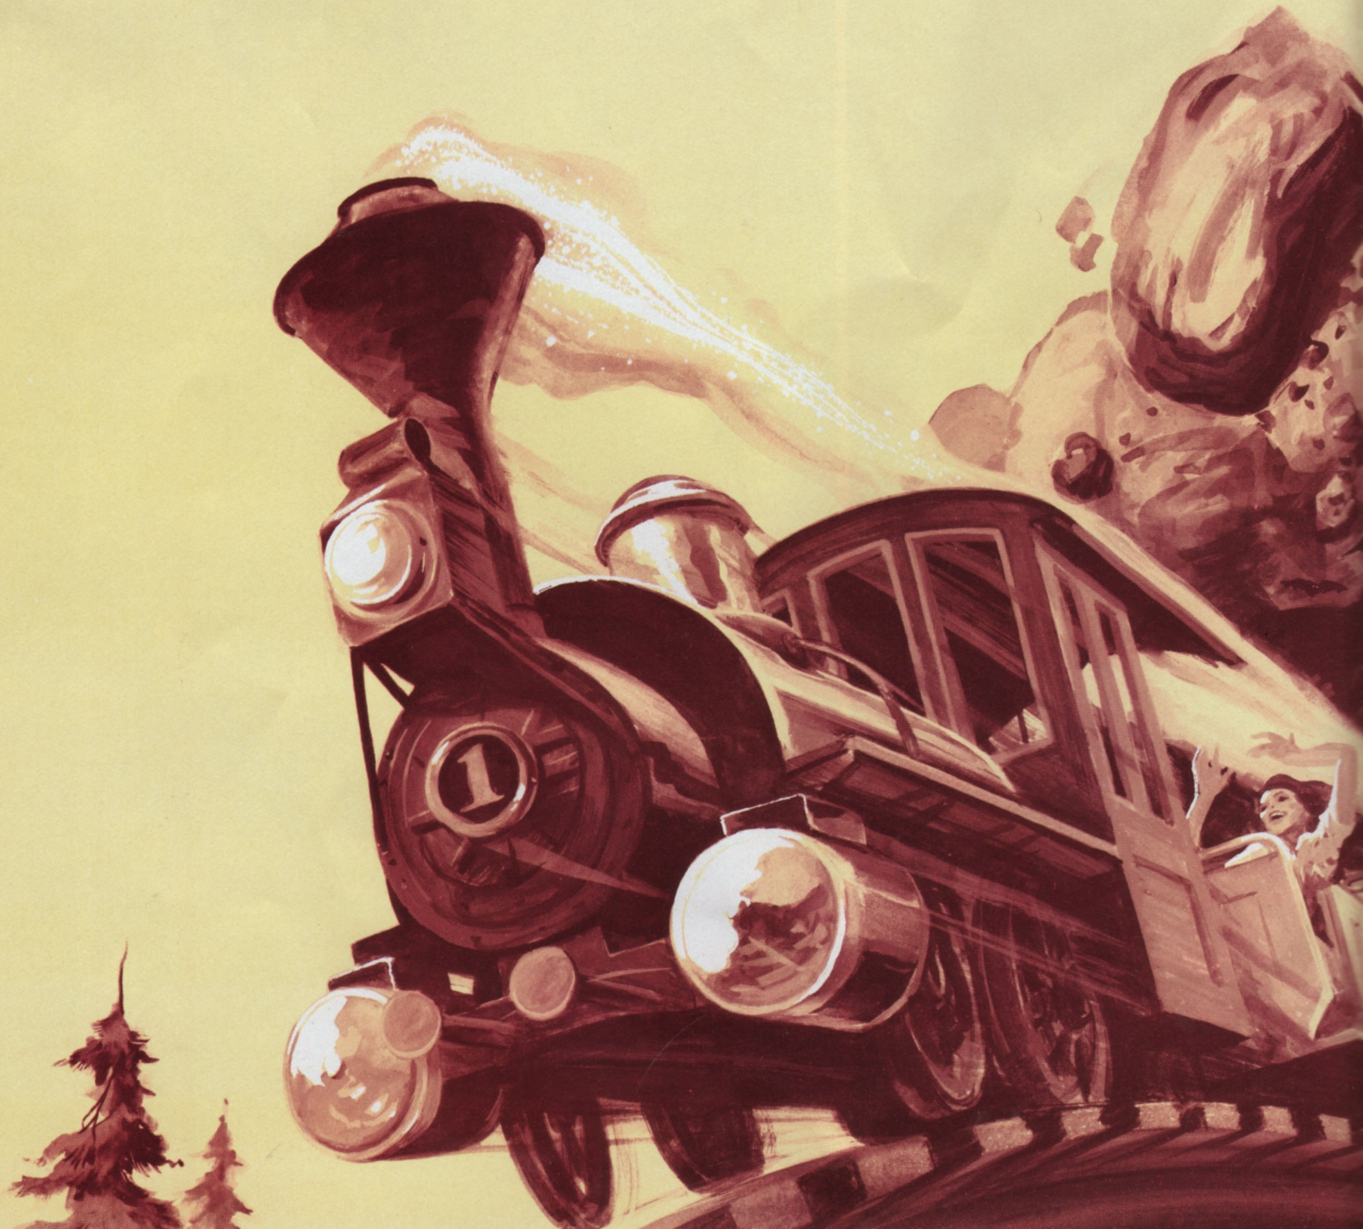
BIG THUNDER STRIKES!

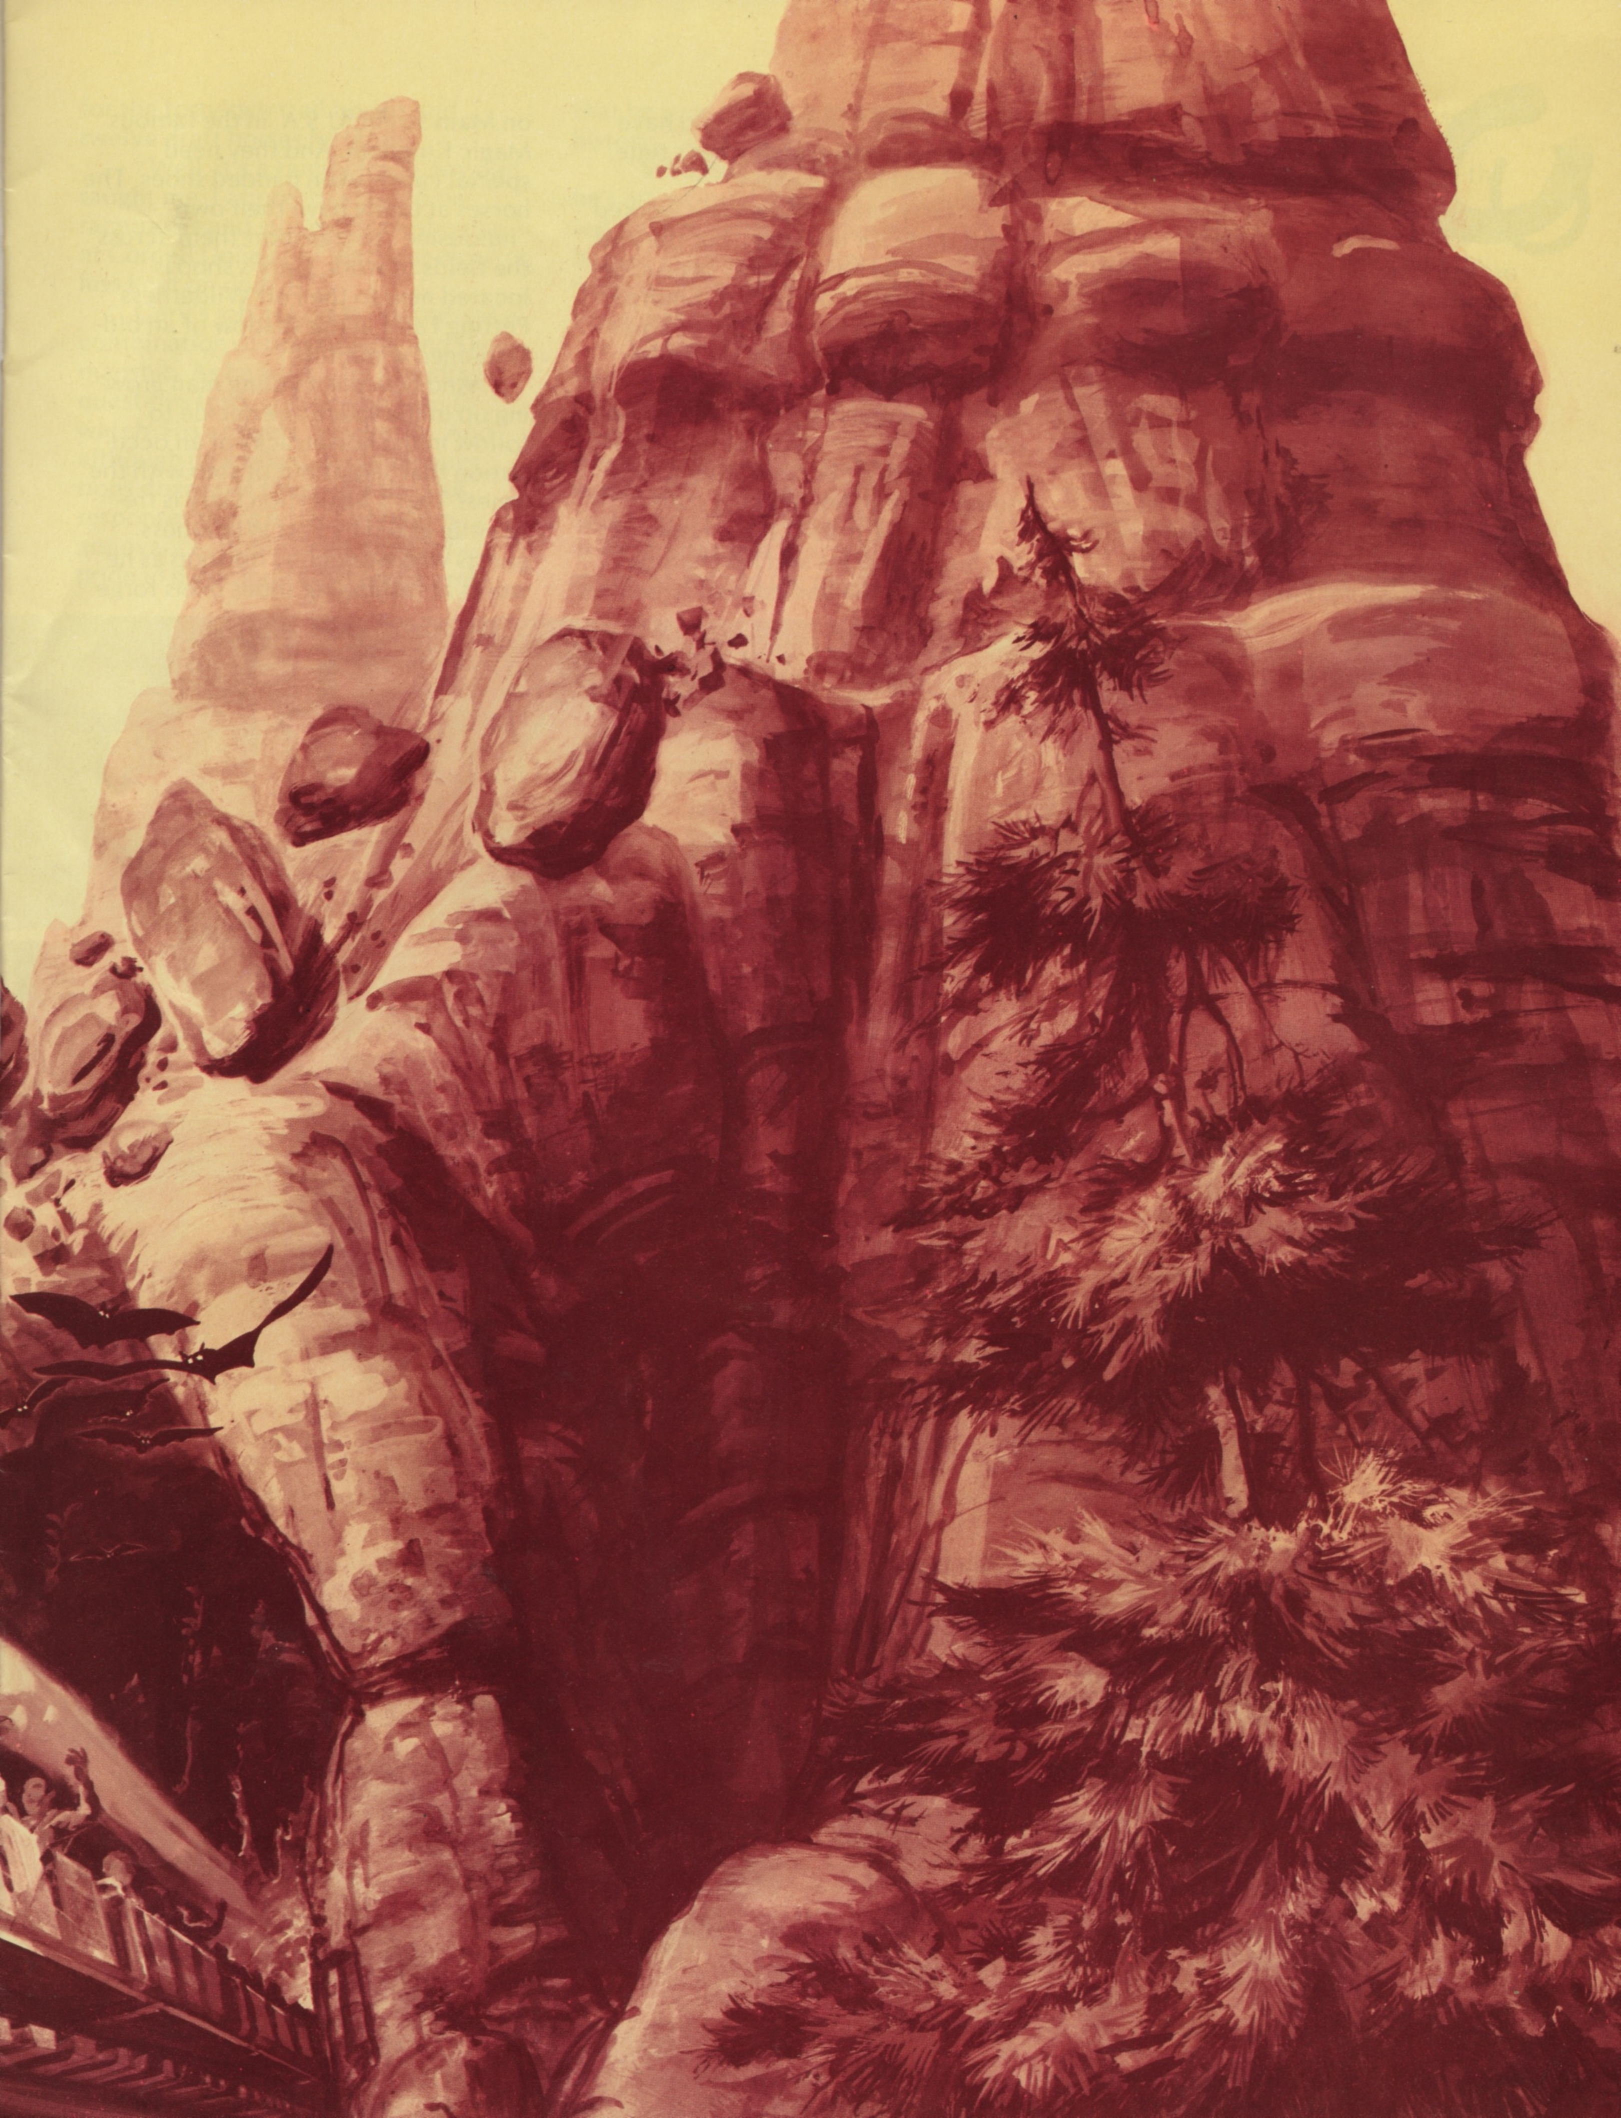
A legend is about to come to life. Later this year, at Disneyland, a new adventure... Big Thunder Mountain Railroad... will be roaring its way through Frontierland. Out of the Old West days, a runaway mine train will swerve, dip and twist its way into foreboding chasms and abandoned mine shafts of Big Thunder Mountain.

Out of Thunder Ridge Depot, the train races into dark caverns where an eerie glow surrounds dripping stalactites ... past phosphorescent pools shimmering in rainbows of color. Flying bats come screeching out of the shadows! It's positively ghostly the way the speeding engine careens down the track under waterfalls and into Coyote Canyon where wild animals glare from behind rocks and trees.

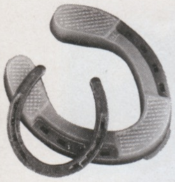
At the top of a spiral butte, passengers will have seconds to enjoy the breathtaking panorama of the wind-carved rock formations and wooded landscape below. Then there's more action as the train picks up speed before reentering Big Thunder. A deafening earthshaking avalanche threatens to seal the only remaining exit! But in the nick of time, the train escapes—back to the safety of Thunder Ridge Depot.

Big Thunder Mountain Railroad... it's the fastest, and wildest railroad anywhere in the West! Come to Disneyland. Ride a legend in your own time.





The Village Smithy



Under the spreading citrus trees the "village smithy" now plies his age-old trade in a most unlikely setting.

Nestled among the orange trees on the quiet side of the Vacation Kingdom in the Fort Wilderness Resort is the timeless scene of a blacksmith at work beside his glowing forge.

His name is Gary Wade. He's a third generation "smithy" and a man whose wife says was born a hundred years too late. "I've always liked old things . . . antiques and things—and I guess that kind of fits in with what I do. I like history. I like to read about the old times. I guess I should have been born in my grandfather's time. That's what my wife says."

Thirty-year-old Gary has worked at his trade for ten years. For the past five years, he has not only been shoeing but showing off for the hundreds of visitors who come to the open-air shop at the Walt Disney World Tri-Circle-D Ranch. His present job is even more unusual than most modern-day blacksmiths, because he works mainly on draft horses rather than riding stock or horseracing stars.

The Tri-Circle-D is the home of the huge Belgians and Percherons used to pull the horsedrawn streetcars on Main Street, U.S.A. in the famous Magic Kingdom. And they need special care—even padded shoes. The horses actually have their own "limousine" to transport them across the fields to work. Gary's shop is located next to the Fort Wilderness Petting Farm in the shadow of an old-fashioned windmill.

And how did a young man growing up in the space age decide to follow in the horsetracks of an occupation that seems out of step with the times? That's a question Gary is frequently asked by Fort Wilderness guests who wander by his shop as he works at fashioning shoes in his forge for the forty-two trail horses and twelve draft horses he tends.

"Well, it's a family trade. My dad taught me. I apprenticed at some racetracks and studied horseshoeing at Cornell University. And just more or less kept on doin' it."

Gary's job at Fort Wilderness is a combination of practicality and showmanship. As he works, he's fielding questions from guests who stop to watch. His answers flow easily. And although he's asked the same questions dozens of times in a day, his responses don't reflect boredom or annoyance. But instead, they reflect pride in his unique craft and a sense that he is, in effect, a piece of living history.

"What are the shoes made of?" he's asked as he prepares to fit a thick red shoe to a massive chestnut draft horse. "Plastic with a steel core," he replies. "How come they don't use the metal ones?"

Gary explains that the metal shoes are still used for trail horses, but that "we have a unique situation here at Walt Disney World because of the street in the Magic Kingdom. The horses walk the same path continuously and they'd wear the street out in six months to a year with steel shoes. So we use the plastic covered shoe to protect the street and also make the horses more comfortable."

Hammers, files and tongs are the blacksmith's stock-in-trade, but beyond the tools of his craft, Gary is a firm believer in developing empathy with his equine friends.

"You've got to love horses . . . there's no question about that. You've got to be able to get along with them. More so than the people you're working with."

And what about the future for a trade that's a throwback to a simpler, slower-paced way of life? Well, Gary says simply, "As long as there are horses, there'll be blacksmiths."

Timepieces with Character

Since 1971, the New Century Clock Shop on Disneyland's Main Street, U.S.A., has been offering an interesting array of fashionable watches and clocks to the discerning buyer who appreciates unusual timepieces "with character." Naturally, the most famous character featured on over 50 different styles of watches happens to be Mickey Mouse. Other favorites: Donald Duck, Goofy, Cinderella, Snow White, and Alice in Wonderland can also be found passing the time in a selection of watches, plus many-styled clocks.

The New Century Clock Shop is sponsored by the Elgin Company, a time-honored name in watchmaking. Elgin, along with its subsidiaries Helbros and Bradley, can provide a Mickey Mouse watch for just about everyone . . . from a simple non-jeweled model for children to a stylish quartz-crystal Mickey for the more discerning buyer. Special Mickey's 50th birthday watches, all registered editions, feature the original Steamboat Willie on the face.

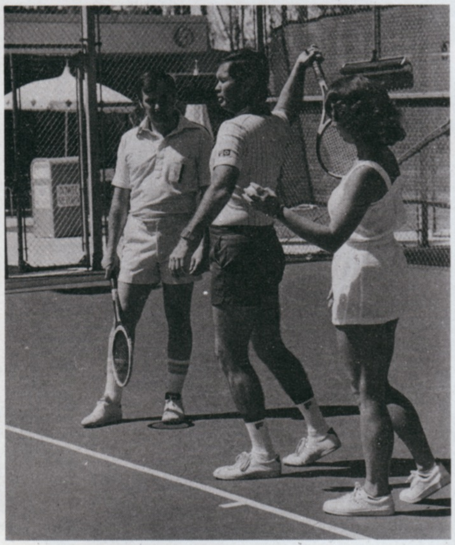
Non-character timepieces, for men and women, as well as fine designer wall clocks and floor-standing grandfather's clocks are available.

There's a certain turn-of-the-century charm at the Clock Shop that invites Disneyland's family guests to designate it as a meeting place at the end of a long, exciting day in the Park. It's a great place in which to unwind.

Just what your tennis game ordered

Your first attempt to deliver a mean topspin falls in the net. You come back with your "old reliable" which falls softly into your opponent's court, and he, predictably, slams it back.

All too familiar? Most tennis players realize the difference between winning and losing shots is a small one. With just a "little something extra" added to your playing philosophy or technique, you can learn to play winning tennis. The new Walt Disney World tennis program is designed to do just that.



Rick Day, Director of Tennis, has put together an encompassing program structured to "add to" what each player has already developed.

"We don't try to make major changes. There's no one set way to play tennis. If you look at the top ten players today, they'll have ten different styles of play. We try to make the sessions fun, yet informative."

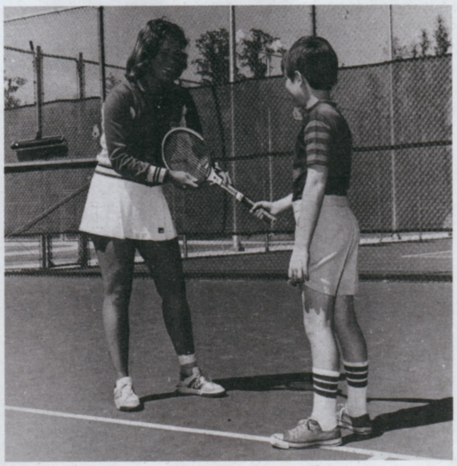
The new program features the Tennis Studio — a two-hour, individualized analysis of your game. Each Studio session utilizes a color videotape of every aspect of your game viewed on a giant, five-foot screen with a critique and advice for playing practical tennis.

"All too often, a player forgets a large percentage of what he learns in a session," says Rick. So, each participant receives a taped cassette of pointers, reminders, and key phrases that will provide reference points for improvement once he returns home.

The program includes group development sessions, each concentrating on a different aspect of the game, such as the stroke and doubles and tactics. In addition, all players have access to two practice lanes equipped with automatic ball machines.

Recently added to the program is a unique Tot Clinic featuring Walt Disney character posters used in sessions to get the young ones started in developing eye-to-hand coordination and body control.

"Essentially, the program offerings have been expanded to include a half-dozen formats. We have also developed our teaching staff to the point where we have one of the finest staffs in Florida."



Rick, recognized as one of Florida's top teaching professionals, has assembled a top-notch teaching staff which includes former Wimbledon and Forest Hills touring pro Bev Buckley, former Vanderbilt star Steve Babb, along with Mark Cafarelli and Sandy Rhoades.

"Our teaching philosophy is to try to get the person to play winning percentage tennis by utilizing a player's own physical capabilities and basic style and combining that with the technical aspects of the game that will be most effective for that particular player."

> "It's a pleasure to see the pride these young people take in the success of their own Junior Achievement companies. They get really excited... becoming more and more appreciative of the free enterprise opportunities available in this country and looking forward to total involvement in the business world."

JUNIOR ACHIEVEMENT...
Recognizes the Leaders of Tomorrow

And at Disneyland, the Walt Disney Studios and Walt Disney World, the Junior Achievement Program is being recognized by involved people who want to do their share in informing young people of the intricacies of the "grown-up" business world.

In the event you are unaware of the Junior Achievement organization, let us explain its purpose. As the nation's oldest youth economic education program, JA teaches high school students the principles of the American free enterprise system by helping them run their own small businesses. They learn business operation, not from textbooks or lectures, but by actually going through every phase of a functioning business enterprise.

In this "learn by doing" program, JA groups of usually 20 teenagers form their own companies. They meet once a week and elect officers, sell stock, and produce and sell a product or service. At the end of a one-or-two semester cycle, they liquidate — closing out their records, preparing annual reports and paying dividends to their stockholders.

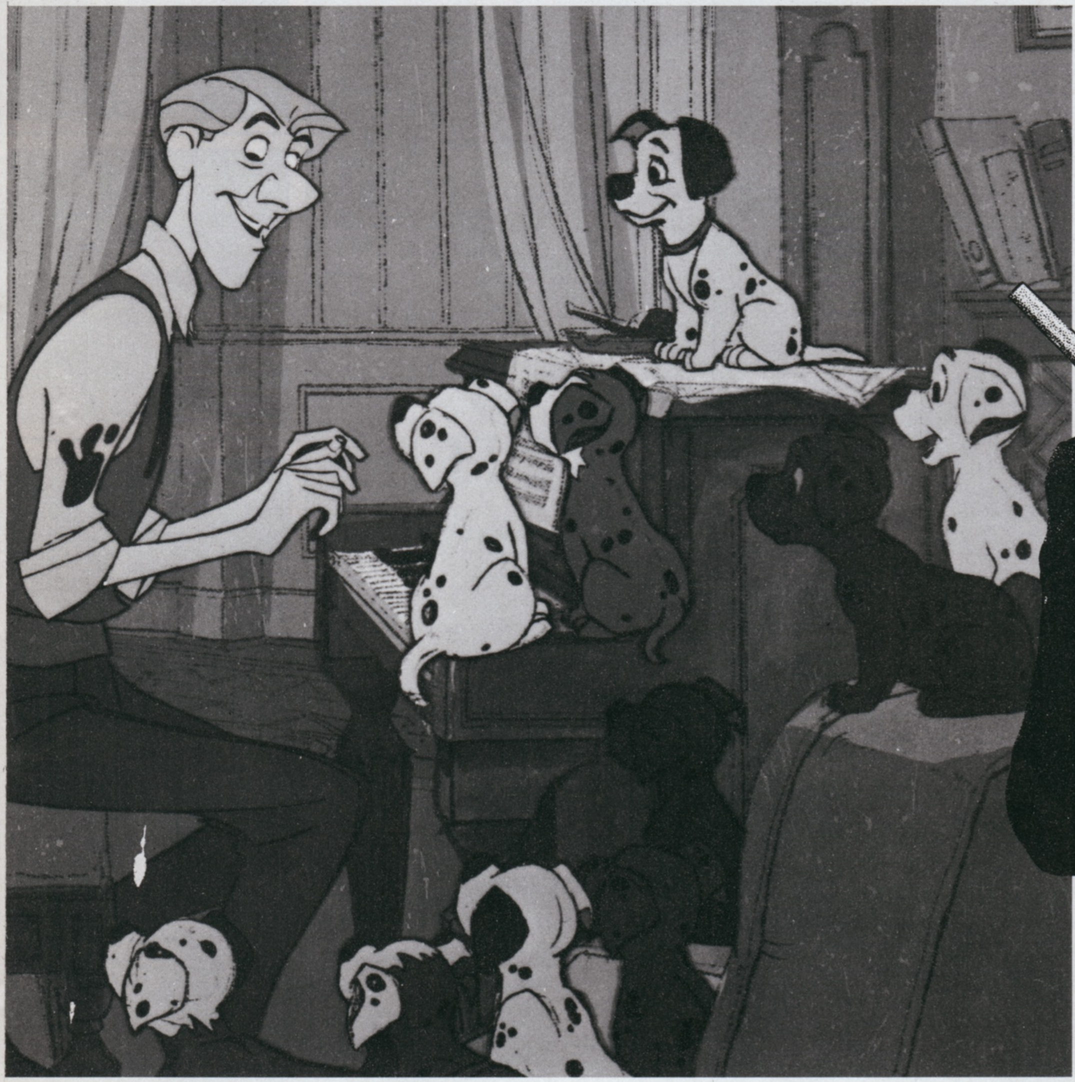
In order to get their company off the ground, Junior Achievement groups need the help of a local company in the form of adult Advisers. At the present time, Disneyland is proudly into its 11th year of providing management volunteers for these advisory positions. Junior Achievers advertise in the Park's weekly publication, display their product backstage, and operate their own booth at the Disneyland Arts and Crafts Fair.

The tremendous popularity of the JA Program is attributable to its unique method of education. It is compatible with schools, some of which give school credit for this extracurricular activity. JA's workshop in economics is a national organization which was the first to take the initiative in presenting a National Business Hall of Fame.

Funds to maintain Junior Achievement staffs, equipment and materials come from the support of local business communities. To invest in members of JA, is to invest in the careers and attitudes of the young leaders who will shape the future of our country and our lives. The Disney organization is proud to have a part in shaping that future.

SUMMER MOVIE

Three outstanding family films will be released by Walt Disney Productions during the summer months of June, July and August. Children and adults alike will welcome the news of the re-release of the charming sophisticated cartoon, "One Hundred and One Dalmations." Two bumbling "outlaws" — Tim Conway and



"ONE HUNDRED AND ONE DALMATIONS"

Love and romance fill the screen in this animated feature about two dogs, their human pets and a nation-wide canine dragnet for diabolical dognappers who have made off with the 15-puppy family of Pongo and Perdita.

In London's Regents Park, the Dalmatian, Pongo, falls in love with a pretty Dalmatian, Perdita, and in no time at all has her human "pet," Anita, falling for his master, Roger. A double wedding takes place.

Evil Cruella De Ville attempts to buy Perdita's first litter of 15 puppies because she has a passion for coats made of Dalmatian fur. Told there would be no sale, she hires two underworld characters to dognap the pups. Through the cooperation of the other dogs of London, the puppies are rescued, along with 84 others.

On Christmas Eve, Roger and Anita receive the unexpected gift of one hundred and one Dalmatians, whereupon they all move to the country and settle down to a happy life on their Dalmatian Plantation.

"THE APPLE DUMPLING GANG RIDES AGAIN"

In this brave new western, Tim Conway and Don Knotts recreate their roles of Amos and Theodore from Disney's highly successful 1975 film, "The Apple Dumpling Gang" for, you guessed it . . . "The Apple Dumpling Gang Rides Again"! The setting this time is against a background of train robbers, the United States Army and exciting espionage. In the rolling hills of Sonora, California, and at a fort on the dusty plains near Kanab, Utah, the filmmakers found authentic Old West

SCHEDULE

Don Knotts—team up again in a hilarious comedy, "The Apple Dumpling Gang Rides Again." And finally, the classic Mark Twain story, "A Connecticut Yankee in King Arthur's Court," has been modernized to relate to space-age technology in Disney's newest comedy-fantasy, "The Unidentified Flyng Oddball."

Tim Conway plays Amos, definitely not the brains of the outfit. Don Knotts plays Theodore, definitely not the brawn of the group. Harry Morgan portrays Major Gaskill, head of Fort Concho. Jack Elam plays the bad guy, Big Mac. Together, this talented cast provides a comedy of errors involving a bank robbery that wasn't planned, a fort destroyed in a devastating explosion and a narrow escape from pursuing train robbers. Safe at last, the Apple Dumpling Gang rides off into the sunset.

"UNIDENTIFIED FLYING ODDBALL"

"The Unidentified Flying Oddball" concerns an astronaut and his lookalike robot who are put into orbit and accidentally carried back in time to the reign of King Arthur.

Young comedian Dennis Dugan plays the befuddled spaceman. Veteran British actor Kenneth More is a regal, but whimsical King Arthur. Two of England's most versatile performers are the villains. Jim Dale, who starred recently in Disney's "Pete's Dragon," is the evil Sir Mordred. Ron Moody, best known as Fagin in the hit English musical, "Oliver," is the wily wizard Merlin.

Making her U.S. film debut as Alisande is blonde, blue-eyed beauty Sheila White, who proves herself a deft comedienne in this new exciting Disney film.

A magnificent medieval English castle dating back to the 11th Century, provides the exterior setting for Camelot. And festive medieval scenes and dazzling costumes provide additional class to the already classic story, "A Connecticut Yankee in King Arthur's Court."

Summer Scenes at the Parks

In one day you'll be dazzled and entertained in more ways than you ever thought possible; but then a summer day in Disneyland or the Magic Kingdom of Walt Disney World is no ordinary one.

From the first cluster of colored lights bursting from the darkness, the evening Main Street Electrical Parade engulfs its entire audience in light, music and color. Giant floats, fanciful creatures, dancers, and famous Disney characters are all part of the scenes sketched by more than 500,000 tiny light bulbs of all imaginable colors.

Following the spectacle of lights, the "Fantasy in the Sky" fireworks set the sky aglow each night. More than fireworks, "Fantasy in the Sky" combines dazzling pyrotechnical effects with a musical score that creates a themed show.

A medley of Disney tunes begins the show as the sky turns into a kaleidoscope of multi-colored pinwheels, circles and cartwheels. Roman candles, rockets and giant bombshells explode into showers of red, blue, green, silver, gold and pink.

A "Salute to America" follows as the music shifts to patriotic anthems while the sky scene changes to whirligigs of red, white, and blue.

Everyone loves a parade! And at Disneyland and the Magic Kingdom of Walt Disney World, summertime parades are truly special.

New this summer is Dumbo's Circus Parade, stepping off daily down Main Street, U.S.A. Off in the distance you hear it—the calliope circus music growing louder and louder as it draws closer and closer. The excitement is contagious; you take your place along the sidewalks and wait with eager anticipation; the aroma of popcorn permeates the air. Then suddenly, there it is, right before your eyes!

Colorful costumes, comical ballerinas, a circus train, floats, ringmaster Mickey Mouse, and Dumbo himself are all a part of the color and pageantry of Dumbo's Circus Parade.

At Disneyland this summer, dancing, with an emphasis on the nostalgic sounds of Big Bands will be featured throughout the Park. The Plaza Gardens will be the scene for dancing of the Forties to the tunes of famous name bands. At Space Mountain Stage, dynamic theatrical effects of lights and illusions will provide disco entertainment for dancers and onlookers alike. On-stage, performers will appear and disappear in puffs of smoke . . . seeming to levitate above the stage!

Add to all this the delightful music of the All American Marching Band and Singers and the Kids of the Kingdom, plus colorful visiting school bands and you have a sampling of the wonderful summertime magic awaiting you at both Disneyland and the vacation kingdom of Walt Disney World.

The spectacular Main Street Parade, featuring 500,000 colorful lights, will return to dazzle Park visitors as it has for the past five years.

There'll be dancing all over the Park, with emphasis on big bands showcasing at the Plaza Gardens. Count Basie and his orchestra, the Tommy Dorsey Orchestra, the Glenn Miller Orchestra and Woody Herman and the Young Thundering Herd will be featured.

Magical illusions, special mirrored effects, and dazzling lights will combine to create the "Disco Explosion," a new summer show at the Space Mountain Stage. For music, dancing and magic . . . the Space Mountain

Stage will be the place to be this summer!

A daily Disney character parade will be offered this year . . . including brand new circus-themed "Big Top" units. Add to all this the music of the All American Marching Band and Singers; the Kids of the Kingdom; and Teddy Buckner's Dixieland sounds . . . and you have a sampling of the 1979 summertime scene at Disneyland!

Music and Records

Walt Disney Music Company has a sing-along, dance-along summer coming up for 1979. "Mickey Mouse Disco" will be released in June. Disneyland's Disco Group performs exciting dance songs like "Disco Mouse" and "Stayin' Alive." Mickey and Minnie demonstrate the latest dazzling disco dance steps . . . and introduce their own disco madness "Mousetrap"!

Disneyland Record's second summer release is "Disney's Children's Favorites." This is a happy collection of 25 sing-along songs like "Take Me Out To The Ball Game," "Home On The Range" and "Comin' Round The Mountain." Youngsters can sing right along with the Disneyland Children's Chorus for hours of fun!

Walt Disney's animated canine adventure, 101 Dalmatians will be released to theaters nationwide this summer. The fun-filled 101 Dalmatians Storyteller will also be available in record stores. This is a long-playing album of the story and songs from the movie, plus a full-color 11-page storybook. There will also be a 7-inch Disneyland Little LP read-along album and a DQ album of this exciting story.

Movies

Space-age technology is pitted against medieval superstition and treachery in Walt Disney Productions' newest comedy-fantasy, to be released this summer, the "Unidentified Flying Oddball." The screenplay was inspired by Mark Twain's classic story, "A Connecticut Yankee in King Arthur's Court." Two of England's most versatile performers star in the film . . . Jim Dale, remembered for his performance in "Pete's Dragon"; and Ron Moody, best known as Fagin in the hit musical, "Oliver."

"One Hundred and One Dalmations" will be re-released this summer . . . charming young and old alike. The touching story concerns two dogs, their human "pets" and a nation-wide canine dragnet for devious dognappers. The sophisticated cartoon was originally released in January of 1961 and soon proved to be another Disney film favorite.

Tim Conway and Don Knotts team up again for a sequel to Disney's highly successful film, "The Apple Dumpling Gang," as they play two bumbling outlaws trying to go straight in "The Apple Dumpling Gang Rides Again." Driven by their desire for fame and money, the hapless pair sets out again on Clarise, the comical donkey, to find new adventure. This exciting film is also scheduled for summer release.
